Ross Cottrell began his career in graphic design handling all aspects of the design process while working for an advertising agency in North Carolina. His experiences soon lead him to the position of Head Designer for a private firm in the Washington DC area where he also began doing freelance design work. After several years, Ross and his wife, Joanna, chose to relocate to escape the hurried pace of the corporate world and get back to simpler way of life.

A place to call home was found in Stockton Springs, Maine. Ross, a designer of many avenues, meticulously blended old and new characteristics of architectural design when he built and hand-crafted the home where his family currently resides.

Ross began operating his own studio in Maine as Cottrell Designs in 2003. Today, Cottrell Designs provides the full spectrum of services, to include identity creation, branding, material sourcing, product development, and printing services. Ross' clients range from small home-based businesses and not-for-profits to large privately held multimillion dollar enterprises including French's Point. Refer to their enclosed brochure as a sample of his work.

Cottrell Designs will be providing consultation, development, design, and print services for paper materials and stationary including the one-of-a-kind and hand assembled invitations for the rehearsal, wedding & reception, and farewell brunch for Real Weddings Maine 2009.
